"In light of psalms such as these, God's incarnation in Jesus the Christ should not be seen as God's introducing grace for the first time. It is part of God's character to extend grace, something God does throughout the Old Testament. Instead, God's being in Christ should be seen as God's showing the extent of divine graciousness. God's grace has no bounds. Thus, the Incarnation does not introduce God's grace; it demonstrates its extent." - Frank Spina, Professor of Old Testament at Seattle Pacific University
